

Bouquet Banque Nursery presents The 2017 Hardy Cyclamen openhouse

January 28th & 29th - Saturday and Sunday
10am - 4pm

The last week has been just plain nasty with lows here of 14F almost every nite, but . . . the Cyclamen coum are recovering nicely and should be gorgeous for our winter openhouse. Some are beginning to bloom now so we should see houses of bright color by the end of the month. (It always makes me nervous to see the leaves all scrunched up when we hit these temps but they are a fantastic group of winter blooming plants and I always feel better after just three days of 30 and 40 degrees.) Things have been rearranged a bit this year and we think they should be easier to see and shop. Also, put your name on the wish list for epimediums as dividing begins soon.

One major new 'happening' has been the construction of Bill's new woodworking shop. This means the basketry studio has also been revamped as we prepare for 2017 classes.

Bill will be teaching his first traditional German skined willow class in July, with students from across the US attending. Be sure and peruse the sample class baskets that Judy is offering this year. A sign-up sheet will be provided. And in September, we are taking a group to Germany for the willow festival and classes in Lichtenfels. Of course, several gardens, including the Palm Garden in Frankfurt are also on the agenda.
